

GIT AND GITHUB

GIT

Git is a software – run on your local system it track local file system – what changes you make – what is the modules change – everything the git software will read the process. It will take your file to the online website called Github. You can use github command.

GITHUB

- Website – web application run on your cloud.
- It stores your files
- Who will use – teacher, developer, youtubers, content creators, etc.
- Developer should not use zip files
- It has private repo and public repo (repo means repository)
- Local file save and tracking & project demo as single user

GIT COMMANDS

- git init (once for repo)
- git add . (repeated for changes)
- git commit -m “something you change” (repeated for changes)
- git branch -m main (once)
- git remote add origin repolink (once)
- git push -u origin main (used to push always before closing task)
- git pull . (used to push always before opening task)
- gite code .